Fatality Catastrophe (FAT/CAT) Reports

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR Occupational Safety & Health Administration

Weekly Reports of Fatalities, Catastrophes, and Other Events

Description:
This table provides links to weekly summaries of fatalities and catastrophes resulting in the hospitalization of three or more workers. Employers must report these incidents to OSHA within eight hours. The summaries below include only preliminary information, as reported to OSHA Area Offices or to States which operate OSHA-approved State Plans. OSHA investigates all work-related fatalities and catastrophes. Once the OSHA investigation is complete, these summary reports below will be updated with webpage links to their corresponding inspectors, which lists citation information.

- OSHA publishes an updated Fatality/Catastrophe Reports on its web site
- FAT/CAT Reports contain the following information:
 - Date of incident
 - Company and Location
 - Preliminary description of the incident

History of OSHA

- OSHA stands for the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, an agency of the U.S. Department of Labor.
- OSHA's responsibility is worker safety and health protection
- OSHA was created by Congress under the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970

- There were four main events that led to the OSHA laws.
 - 1911 Triangle Shirtwaist Company: a fire in New York City killed 146 of 500 employees in one of the worst work-related disasters in our country's history. Factory workers died because doors were locked and there were no fire escapes.
 - Production for World War I: The government created a Working Conditions Service to help states inspect plants and reduce hazards.
 - 1930's Roosevelt's New Deal: As part of President Roosevelt's New Deal, additional laws increased the federal government's role in job safety and health. But the federal role was mainly to provide services and information to state governments.
 - 1960 Statistics: 14,000 workers died every year and more than 2.2 million workers were not able to work due to injuries and illnesses.

OSH Act

- On December 29, 1970 President Nixon signed the OSHA Act. This Act created OSHA, the agency, which formally came into being on April 28, 1971.
- With the creation of OSHA, all employers in the United States had the legal responsibility to provide a safe and healthful workplace for employees.
- The OSH Act is also known as Public Law 91-596.

OSHA Standards

- Who does OSHA cover?
 - All private sector employers and their workers in the 50 states and all territories and jurisdictions under federal authority.
 - Religious groups are covered if they employ workers for secular purposes, such as maintenance or gardening.
- Who is Not covered by OSHA?
 - Self-employed
 - Immediate members of farming families not employing outside workers
 - Mine workers, certain truckers and transportation workers, an atomic energy workers who are covered by other federal agencies
 - Public employees in state and local governments, although some states have their own plans that cover these workers.

- OSHA's Mission: is to save lives, prevent injuries, and protect the health of America's workers. To achieve this some of the things OSHA does to carry out its mission are:
 - Develop job safety and health standards, and enforcing them through worksite inspections
 - Maintaining a reporting and recordkeeping system to keep track of job-related injuries and illnesses
 - Provide training programs to increase knowledge about occupational safety and health.

Why is this Training Important?

- Even though OSHA has had an impact on worker safety and health, significant hazards and unsafe conditions still exist in the U.S. workplaces.
 - On average, 15 workers die every day from job injuries
 - Over 5,600 Americans die from workplace injuries
 - Over 4 million non-fatal workplace injuries and illnesses were reported
 - The estimated cost of occupational injuries and illnesses are from $145 billion to $290 billion a year for direct and indirect costs.

Know Your Rights

- Hazard Communication or “Right to Know” standard provide additional rights:
 - A safe and healthful workplace
 - Know about hazardous chemicals
 - Employers must have a written, complete hazard communication program that includes information on: Container labeling, MSDs and Worker training. (Note: MSDs provides important information to workers about hazardous chemicals in the workplace)
 - Employers must also include a list of the hazardous chemicals in each work area and the means the employer uses to inform workers of the hazards of non-routine tasks.
 - The program must explain how the employer will inform employees of hazards to which their workers may be exposed.

- Information about injuries and illnesses in your workplace
 - OSHA’s recordkeeping rule requires most employers with more than 10 workers to keep a log of injuries and illnesses.
 - The log, which is also called the OSHA 300, must contain all work-related injuries and illnesses resulting in lost work days, restricted work or transfer to another job, as well as any incident requiring more than first aid treatment.
 - You have a right to review the current log, as well as the logs store for the past 5 years. The employer must provide this by the end of the next work day.

- Complain or request hazard correction from an employer
- Workers may bring up safety and health concerns in the workplace to their employers without fear of discharge or discrimination, as long as the complaint is made in good faith. [Title 29 of the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR 1977.9(c))]
- Training: You have a right to get training from your employer on a variety of health and safety hazards, and standards that your employer must follow.

EMPLOYEES:

- You have the right to notify your employer or OSHA about workplace hazards. You may ask OSHA to keep your name confidential.
- You have the right to request an OSHA inspection if you believe that there are unsafe and unhealthful conditions in your workplace. You or your representative may participate in that inspection.
- You can file a complaint with OSHA within 30 days of retaliation or discrimination by your employer for making safety and health complaints or for exercising your rights under the OSH Act.
- You have the right to see OSHA citations issued to your employer. Your employer must post the citations at or near the place of the alleged violations.
- Your employer must correct workplace hazards by the date indicated on the citation and must certify that these hazards have been reduced or eliminated.
- You have the right to copies of your medical records and records of your exposures to toxic and harmful substances or conditions.
- Your employer must post this notice in your workplace.
- You must comply with all occupational safety and health standards issued under the OSH Act that apply to your own actions and conduct on the job.
